I aim to create a passion for learning among my students and so they can appreciate the value of classroom learning in the real world. Also to work along students with special needs to give them the best opportunities to learn through differentiation and inclusions practice in all relevant subject areas and extracurricular activities.

I utilize a variety of pedagogical approaches in the classroom to contribute to ongoing curriculum development while displaying interpersonal skills with students, staff and parents. I regularly collaborate with teachers in developing long-term plans for struggling students by focusing on classroom success and achieving individual student goals.

I am experienced in working with students with Autism, Hearing impairment, Speech Language impairment and Intellectual Disability.
